HOME, Sweet HOME

Raise your hand if this sounds familiar: You work all day, wedding plan all night—and attempt to squeeze in spin sessions and clean eating in between. Philly-based meal delivery service Home Appétit takes one of those stresses off your plate with the wholesome dinners and lunches that are delivered on Monday evenings. The weekly-changing menu is full of flavor-packed, high-quality meals like Greek chicken couscous bowls, everything bagel spice salmon and red quinoa and broccoli salad. “After a long day, once you have already hit that hungry stage, it’s hard to make good choices,” says chef and owner Lee Wallach. “We eliminate that stressor for you.” The chefs use organic meats, ingredients from local farms and steer clear of saturated fats and preservatives. There are options if you are dairy-free or just hate red peppers too. And there’s no subscription, meaning there’s one less thing to manage before your big walk down the aisle. Home Appétit delivers to Philadelphia and surrounding counties. homeappetitphilly.com —Ashley Primus ever, hosts are needing event help. “We are helping with lots of backyard parties and weddings on farms,” she says. “Our team wears masks and gloves. Hiring Party Host Helpers has made parties more organized and sanitary because it is only our team handling the food versus guests diving in.” From $50 per hour per helper. partyhosthelpers.com —Tara Gardner and Alana Testi

Staff from Party Host Helpers will be in serving, arranging and more.

Good Form

Like many businesses trying to navigate opening amid a pandemic, cosmetic surgeon Dr. Louis Bucky’s new Center City location was delayed for most of 2020. “I had the concept for Bucky Body Center from the very beginning, when I first went into practice 25 years ago,” says Bucky of his state-of-the-art facility that opened in November. It is his fourth location in the region, his third in Philadelphia—but is a whole new concept in the beauty and wellness space. “I dreamed of creating a space that had amazing aftercare treatments for surgical patients because I believe that health, wellness and optimizing results is ongoing.” True to its name, the Bucky Body Center offers solutions to postsurgery problems with a bevy of high-tech, noninvasive, nonsurgical and minimally invasive treatments, some of which are available in Philly for the first time. A team of experts help clients navigate the treatment menu, choosing from cryotherapy and acupuncture to CoolSculpting, BodyTite and beyond. Bucky’s holistic approach to care and cutting-edge treatments are what sets them apart in an increasingly crowded industry. “The services are medically proven and expertly delivered. I’ve handpicked the best treatments from around the world. You will get the results.” 1915 Sansom St., buckybodycenter.com —Kristin Dettlerline

The Bucky Body Center opened last November on 19th and Sansom streets, as the fourth location in the area.

Our best advice for your wedding gown, and really for all things about your wedding, is to go with your gut! You know yourself and your fiancé better than anyone else does, and your wedding day is a representation of the two of you.

We believe the "in the moment" photos are more important than the traditional posed photos. It is in those moments where love, happiness, and excitement take over and you should have a photographer there to capture it all.
We specialize in those "moments."
